

HOLLY DOREMUS
Biographical Sketch

Holly Doremus is the James H. House and Hiram H. Hurd Professor of Environmental Regulation at the University of California, Berkeley; Director of the Berkeley Law Environmental Law Program; and Co-Faculty Director of the Center for Law, Energy, and the Environment. She is also a Member Scholar of the Center for Progressive Reform and serves on the Board of Directors of Defenders of Wildlife. She received her B.S. in biology from Trinity College (Hartford, CT), Ph.D. in plant physiology from Cornell University, and J.D. from the University of California, Berkeley. After law school, she clerked for Judge Diarmuid O'Scannlain of the United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit and practiced law in Corvallis, Oregon. She began her teaching career at the UC Davis School of Law, where she taught for 13 years before moving to UC Berkeley. Doremus has written extensively about environmental and natural resources law; the primary focal points of her research work are biodiversity protection, the intersection between property rights and environmental regulation, and the interrelationship of environmental law and science.